The Cold Wave Flag Ordered Down and

Warmer Weather Promised To-Morrow
—Some Facts and Figures About the Present Frigid Snap—The River.

At 11 o'clock this morning the cold wave flag was ordered down by the chief signal officer, and the indications are that, although the increase in temperature will not be very marked to-day, by to-morrow it will be quite perceptible and in a day or two the mercury will probably be back at its old mark—the freezing point. Last night the lowest figure reached at the signal office was 7° below morning. At 6 o'clock this morning the mercury had slowly crept up to 3° below, and at 10 o'clock it had risen to 1° below. The weather, however, is so snap is about gone suffering humanity may take comfort in the fact that their groans, lamentations and curses in the last two days have been culled out and that the weather is now about to become what is experienced in this city this early in the winter for some years. During last winter, which was especially severe in the extreme cold of January, the minimum registration of the thermometer was 15° below 0° above.

THIS MORNING'S BULLETIN

The Northwest shows a gratifying rise in temperature at the places where polar waves usually sweep in. At Bismarck, the thermometer has increased 31°, and at Bismarck, an almost equally great, improved jump. It was about time.

...the change came, as the gas and pipes had broken, and the gas stove was unusable. The cry of distress from the hungry and thirsty was more piercing as the wind grew more penetrating, and it ever the relief of the old people that was the most of the past forty-eight hours. There have been a number of victims to frozen noses, ears and feet, and the old people that do not see in this cold an opportunity for a change of position, and the lingering reflection of the red sunset in his nasal organ has never had his wits sharpened by repeated blows to the face. As the day advanced the snow slowly from the windows a blue hat and uncovered ears no longer seemed such a striking anomaly—the salt cars ceased running so often, the wind whistled through the gaps in the window platform, and enable a passenger to step on or off without throwing a brick through the window—the “oldest inhabitant” ceased his garulous references to “times of old—times of yore,” and the East River felt warmer and the garden of things showed signs of slowly coming back to the condition of Tuesday when the last Section prediction was issued. The thermometer began to rise, the wind changed to the north Tuesday noon causing a fall from 42° to 39° by evening. Wednesday the lowest temperature recorded was 59° above, and it was a warm day, but the wind was from the north, below zero and brought the intensity of cold to a climax. There were rumors that the river was freezing over last night, but the Sun and the gates were closed against them. One or two of them had come nearly a mile from the district west of Jefferson avenue, and were literally half frozen. People who were protecting them, felt their bones fairly ache with the intense cold, but had no need of argument to convince them that the gates were closed. The gates were closed. What they pictured on the inside of the gates were spontaneous. Yet, having trudged the long distance between their homes and the school, with the keen east wind in their faces, the kids realized the terrible necessity of repeating the painful journey without having an opportunity to thaw themselves out. They knew that it was not a matter of life and death, but that he was late comers ordinarily, even though they were in sight of the building when the gates closed.

It is very probable that the same scene occurred at the gates of many another building in the city, and if it were not for the fact that we find a justification for it, if it occurred at every school in the country. There are certainly some conditions which would warrant a school in its effort to maintain the same rules of discipline, and it is hard to imagine any condition more imperative than that of the temperature this morning. Even though it might be deemed unwise to admit the children to the school room after school opens, they should certainly, on such days as this, have an opportunity to enter the building and warm themselves before making their entrance if they desire to do so other than the furnace-room for their reception.

Magda Ingle's Iphigenie was employed by a large audience at the People's last night. To-night she appears as Judith.

Eben Plympton and Rose Keene are drawing good houses to the Olympia with Tilton's domestic drama of Lygwood.

Muldon says he is prepared for the gigantic task of throwing the German wrestler 300 times in an hour at the Olympia next Sunday afternoon.

The rehearsal of the "Messiah" by the St. Louis Choral Society was very well attended, and the performance gave promise of a signal musical success next Tuesday evening.

Grace Hawthorne gave a very creditable performance of "Frou-Frou" at the People's last night. To-night "Miss Mouton" is the bill, it being the occasion of Miss Hawthorne's debut.

"It's Funny, Very, Very, Very Funny."

Of all humorous productions known to the annals of amusement, few have created the furor throughout this country caused by "Skipped by the Light of the Moon," which will be seen at the Olympia next Sunday. It is an epoch in the annals of fun. Seats are selling rapidly for the entire week.

Late but Still in Time.

Now that the convention of the International Association of Fair and Exposition managers has passed into history and its results are beginning to boom up in the future's distance, Secretary Wade is receiving a number of regrets and inquiries from managers who were chary about joining, for fear the association would be but temporary. He will answer all such by forwarding to the head of every Fair and Exposition in the United States, a circular signed by those present at the late convention and setting forth the objects of the association, calling particular attention to the advisory character of the society and its total want of any assumption at dictatorial power.

ANOTHER EXPLOSION.

The St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons in Trouble Again.

Letter From the State Board of Health to the Dean of the Faculty—The Dean Treats it With Silent Contempt—Lots of Professional Amenities.

This is a very "worrisome" world, as viewed from the standpoint of the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons. A flood of trouble comes upon that institution each winter with almost as much certainty as Christmas and New Year. The newspaper reading public has probably quite a vivid recollection of the civil war that prevailed there last winter, owing to the fact that the members of the faculty became possessed of the silly notion that they had some rights in the institution besides the right to work for it gratuitously. That war ended in the virtual disbandment of the faculty, nine of the professors going out in a revulsion of feeling, and the remainder, who had been placed in the asylum, thinking over their riches disturbed his mental balance.

Subsequently, however, the retired members out of a sense of duty to the students whom they had been instructing, consented to assist in the examination of the graduates and to sign the diplomas of such of them as came up to the proper standard. Such students as failed to obtain the signatures of a majority of the succeeding professors were in a measure "out" and had to seek for their education elsewhere. It is to be noted that they did not secure the recognition of the Missouri State Board of Health as practitioners in this State. In the fall the college reorganized, and is now in full blast. A couple of weeks ago a St. Louis physician, who was not a member of the old faculty, wrote the following letter to Dr. J. C. Hearne, secretary of the State Board of Health:

"Sir: During certain rumors affecting the good standing of the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons, I beg leave, as a member of the medical profession, respectfully to ask for information relative to its status. Does the college as in 'good standing' under its present organization, and will the board recognize as valid diplomas, which may be issued by it, the same as of other colleges of recognized standing? These are questions which the profession and medical students, as well as the general public have a right to demand full information upon, and, therefore, I would urge you if you will kindly reply to this inquiry to make public your answer, or give me leave so to do. If the status of said college be good, such publicity cannot but redound to its benefit. If, on the other hand, it be wanting in any of the essentials, the public has a right to know the facts. Very respectfully, answers the foregoing in a letter dated December 1. He states that after hearing fully from Dr. Bauer and several of his colleagues concerning the graduation last year, the State Board adopted a resolution that all graduates from that school must, in order to be allowed to practice, present the certificate of a majority of the "retiring" members of the faculty as to their fitness, and that each individual graduate must present proofs that he complied with at least the minor requirements of the State Board. Proceeding, Dr. Hearne states that last August, after reading the new catalogue of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, he wrote to Dr. Bauer, Dean of the College, calling his attention to the following paragraph in said catalogue:

DR. HEARNE

"Medical practitioners in medicine, but are locally licensed to practice by holding certificates from legally constituted examining boards, which have been obtained by passing an examination, will be admitted to the third, or graduating class."

Dr. Hearne proceeded to inform Dr. Bauer that, inasmuch as the requirements of the State Board distinctly state that one of the essentials to recognition and a license to practice is that the applicant shall have attended at least two courses of instruction, the promise contained in the paragraph above quoted was not in conformity to the regulations which the Board has laid down. To permit such a thing would be too much like "permitting" students to practice. In short, the Board would positively refuse to recognize any diploma issued under such condition, and notice was sent this early in order that no student might be misled or deceived who, having a term under such condition, was refused a license. Dr. Hearne stated he forwarded this letter to Dr. Bauer, and has proof that Dr. Bauer received it. Subsequently the State Board met and informed the letter as proper (October 15), but deferred action in the case till next meeting. Dr. Hearne concludes his response to the letter of inquiry by giving full authority to publish these facts.

This letter, which is now first published, will create a commotion among the members of the profession here, and the old controversy will probably break out again in a more violent form than ever.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

The City Council met this morning and adjourned until 2 o'clock next Monday.

William Ward of Dorchester, Macoupin County, was united in marriage to Mary Jane Werrick of Venice, Ill., yesterday, by Squire Eggmann.

An election of officers was held last night by the East St. Louis lodge, No. 504, A. F. & A. M., with the following result: P. W. Abbott was elected W. M.; E. J. Eggmann, S. W.; H. O. Leary, J. W.; D. A. Becken, Treasurer, and Alex. Paschall, Secretary.

THE INSTALLATION OF THE NEWLY ELECTED OFFICERS WILL TAKE PLACE TUESDAY, DECEMBER 23.

The East St. Louis Educational Institute, which was granted incorporation papers yesterday by the Secretary of State, is in reality the old Howe Institute, which is hereafter to be known by the above name. The Howe Institute, which has never been self-sustaining, and has only been kept in existence by the contributions of philanthropic citizens, will now be taken hold of by a new management and conducted in an entirely different manner than has been in the past. The gentlemen who compose the management of the new corporation rely solely on the new methods of running the institution which they have determined on for its future success. The incorporators are John B. Bowman, M. M. Stephens and Edward R. Davis, and the capital stock is $10,000.
